Enjoy!

There lived a little boy named Theo in a cozy town. He was cheerful and inquisitive, but could be a bit naughty at times. Every day brought him new adventures, but the most exciting were those when his parents went to work.

One morning, when the sun was just beginning to peek over the horizon, Theo's mom and dad set out for work. They said:

- Theo, stay at home, be careful and don't go outside. Remember the order, do not open the door for others, do not play a lot on the computer, food is in the refrigerator. "Dad and I will come back soon and go to the park together," said mom.

- Yes, and don't do anything dangerous, - said dad.

After his parents left, Theo felt his little heart beat faster. He looked around and decided that he would explore every nook and cranny of the house. He started by checking his room and found nothing new.

Later, Theo came across an old key lying in a drawer. He picked it up and thought that this key might open something interesting. Satisfied with his find, he went to the locked office where mom and dad kept some old things.

- That's interesting! - thought the boy and inserted the key into the lock.

Theo decided to see what could be found behind the locked door. The boy inserted the key into the lock and turned it. The door opened with a soft creak.

As soon as the office door opened, he saw many interesting things. The room was small, but there was enough space for a small wardrobe in which there were various things, a table, a chair and a small mirror.

There were also boxes on the floor of the room containing old photographs, very old-looking books and other things, but Theo was interested in something else.

It was an old red telephone, in the center of the device's case there was a disk with holes for each digit, which was not scrolling well from time to time, and a large wire that spirally connected the handset to the main part of the device.

Theo picked up the receiver and held it to his little ear and said,

- Hello! Is there anyone here? My name is Theo. Hello!!!

After that, Theo decided to press a random number.

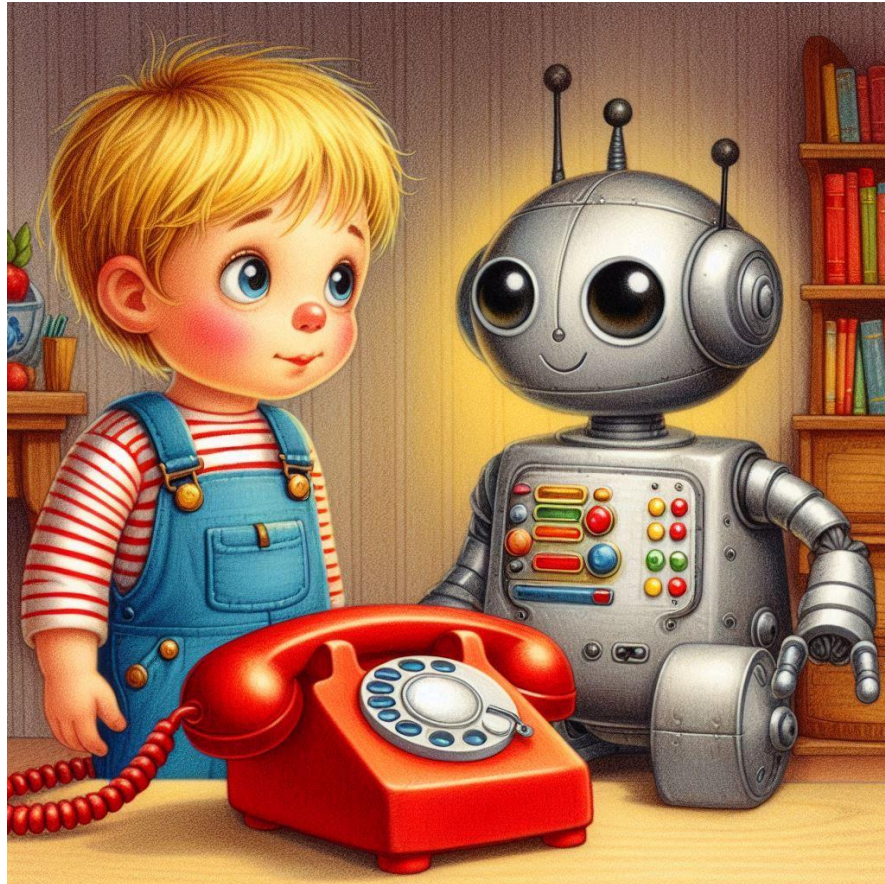

The boy, with all his childish strength, was able to move the time-stubborn disk with numbers from its place, but nothing happened.

Theo, with a sad look, was about to hang up and put the phone back in its place, when suddenly the phone flashed with a bright light, flew almost to the ceiling, and a small robot jumped out of it, which looked very strange and funny.

The robot had big black shiny eyes like two mirrors. Its body was a bright silver color that lit up the entire room even with a small ray of sunlight, with various buttons on the body glowing and flashing.

- Hello! I'm Roni, assistant from the future! What is your name – exclaimed the robot, smiling. His voice was melodious and sonorous.

Theo looked at the new guest with surprise.

- Hello! My name is Theo. Are you a real robot? How did you get here? – he asked, admiring Roni.

- Yes, I am a real robot! This phone is a teleporter. When someone is on the phone who feels lonely and needs help, I immediately show up. My goal is to help and educate. Roni explained. - And now I'm here because you used this phone and I felt I had to respond. Do you need my help?

Theo couldn't contain his excitement.

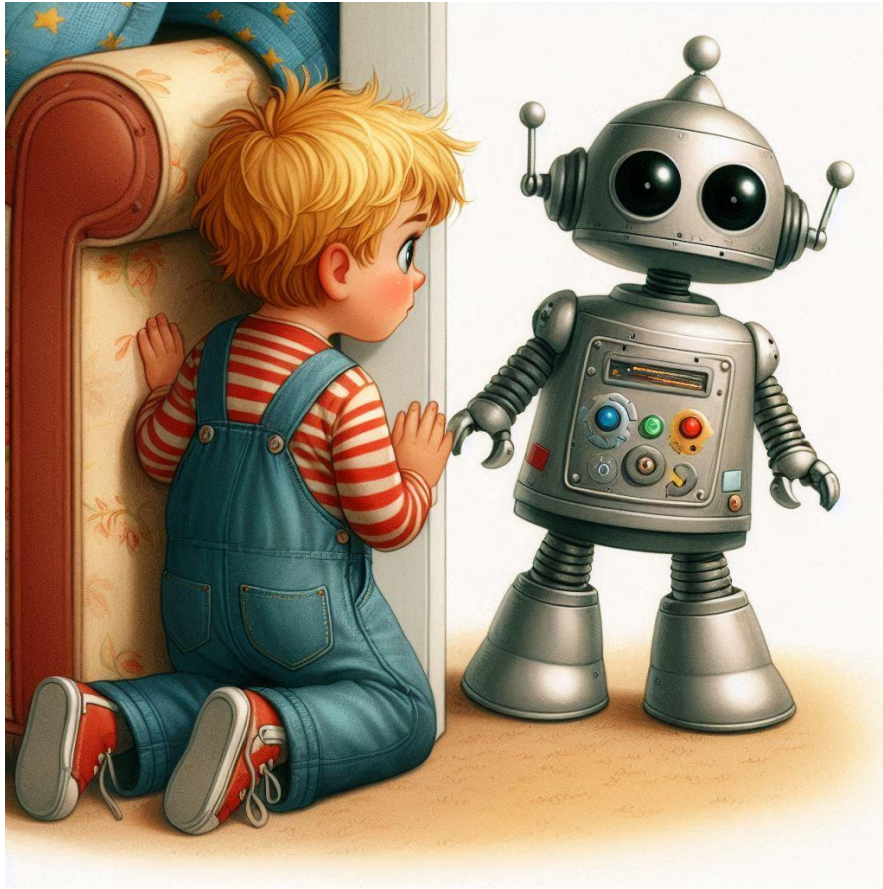

- Wow, it's incredible! And what exactly can you do?? - he asked.

- I can help with any game, create new toys or even arrange a small party! Also, I feel that you feel lonely and bored. - answered Roni. - What do you want to do?

Theo thought and decided that he wanted to play hide-and-seek, but not ordinary hide-and-seek, but the kind where not only people but also toys can hide. Roni agreed and they started playing together.

Theo hid behind the big sofa while Roni moved the toys around the room, making the game even more interesting. The boy laughed as Roni always found him, thanks to his special sensors. The game was very exciting, and the time flew by imperceptibly.

- Now I want to try to do something new. Maybe we can create something together? - Theo suggested.

- Of course! We can collect new toys from the constructor and make something like a puppet theater out of it. And I will be able to make a cartoon out of it with the help of my functions! - said Roni.

Theo was simply delighted with such an idea!

Everything in Theo's field of vision became tools. Roni helped him collect cardboard decorations, arrange toys, and with the help of a special robot program, they created a small cartoon about heroes who save their world from an evil dragon. Theo was amazed at how quickly and easily it turned out.

As the entertainment started to get more complicated, Theo noticed that the house was getting a little unkempt. Toys were scattered all over the room, and the scenery for the cartoon took up a lot of space. He remembered what Mom and Dad had said about the importance of order.

- Roni, I understand that it's a lot of fun, but we need to clean up so that everything is as it was before. Mom and Dad might get mad if they see a mess, - Theo said.

Ronnie nodded.

- You are right, Theo. Let's clean everything together. I'll be happy to help put the toys away and put everything away. This is my task – to help and keep everything in order, - said Roni.

Together they quickly coped with the cleaning. Roni used his special functions to organize the toys while Theo carefully dusted and tried to put everything back in its place. When the job was done, the house looked just as it had before Ronnie arrived.

- Thank you, Roni! It was a lot of fun, but I realized that it is important not only to play, but also to take care of order, - said Theo.

- I'm glad you understood that, little Theodore. Now I can go back to my phone and wait for a new adventure again. Remember you can always call me if you need help or just want to have some fun, - said Ronnie with a smile.

Theo pressed a button on the phone and Ronnie disappeared into the light again. Theo felt that his adventures had become a real lesson, and he was happy that he was able to spend his time in a fun and responsible way.

Theo will remember this day for a very long time.

When mom and dad got home, they were amazed at how clean and tidy everything was in the house.

- Theodore, my son, you are such a good man and already such an adult. We can't worry too much if we leave you home alone. How was your day? Didn't miss you very much?, - asked my mother.

- Everything was cool! I didn't even notice how time passed until you and dad were gone. At first it was really sad, I had already done everything, and watched the cartoons, and did all the lessons, but then the adventures somehow found me by themselves, - answered Theo happily.

- Okay, - said dad, - I'm sorry for taking so long. Me with your mother tried to do everything as quickly as possible. Now, let's get together. We will go to the park as planned, but we will also get ice cream!

Theo smiled, hugged mom and dad very tightly and thought that this day seemed not only fun, but also informative. The boy learned an important lesson: even when his parents are not at home, he must be responsible and obedient. And although he still had to keep a secret about Roni, he was happy that he was able to spend his time in a fun and useful way.
