Who is a fashion designer and what does he do?

A fashion designer is a specialist who creates new wardrobe items. He develops the concept of a clothing collection, draws sketches, launches production and controls the entire process.

Often the work of a clothing designer is associated exclusively with high fashion - incredible outfits from the catwalks of Dolce&Gabbana, Versace and other fashion houses. In fact, designers also create clothes for mass markets, develop stage costumes, carry out individual orders and so on.

Why did I choose this profession?

I've always been a creative person. I love drawing and I love fashion so a fashion designer suits me best. It was not difficult for me to choose my future profession because I was quickly able to understand what I like to do most in life.
